One Year Later: Repair and Reopen Klingle Road!

One year ago today, at a DPW public hearing, longtime DC residents weighed in loud and clear to support repairing and reopening Klingle Road. At long last, according to this week's Northwest Current (11/28/01), Mayor Williams will finally announce his position on the future of Klingle Road. The Mayor's position should be based on the overwhelming public support for the repair of Klingle Road to its original alignment, as evidenced by the positions of six Advisory Neighborhood Commissions (ANC), the citywide ANC assembly, community leaders, local and civic associations, businesses, labor unions, and grassroots efforts of this City's taxpaying citizens, representing over 100,000 people.
